Dear Laura:

It was very thoughtful of you to write to me as you did about my work here. I sincerely appreciate your kind remarks which are most gratifying.

Sincerely,

Dear Allen Dulles:

I was really frightened about the election and I don't like to be frightened. I decided that we had leaned too much on Mr. Eiserhauer and his administration, and that it was high time we thought for ourselves and worked things out. Also what you did made me a little ashamed of my own lack of confidence in people. I do not know whether or not you are doubtful as so many of us are, as to the future of sound leadership in the White House, but I do know that you never doubted for a moment your desire and eagerness to carry on your great and necessary work. Real leaders like you help us in our wavering moments.

A mere "good luck" seems rather inadequate, so may Allah walk with you and us.

Devotedly yours,

Laura Sherman Gray
